THE WHITE MTS. of N.H.

"The Switzerland of America"

The White Mountains occupy that portion of New Hampshire between Lake Winnepesaukee to the south and the Canadian line on the north, overlapping to a small extent the western boundary of the State of Maine. Within this territory are hundreds of mountain peaks, six passes or notches, numberless lakes and the head waters of four great rivers: Saco, Androscoggin, Merrimack and the Connecticut. Of all the peaks in this scenic region the highest and most famous is Mount Washington, whose summit is conveniently reached by the Mount Washington Railway.

The White Mountain region is filled with many natural wonders, and the panoramas from the various points are unlimited. From the summit of Mount Washington the radius of view extends for almost a hundred miles in all directions.

Surrounding the giant Mount Washington are the peaks of the Presidential Range: Adams, 5802 feet; Jefferson, 5725 feet; Clay, 5154 feet; Monroe, 5390 feet; Madison, 5350 feet; Lafayette, 5269 feet; Franklin, 5028 feet. To the north are Starr King and Cherry Mountains; to the south, Jackson, Chocorua and a host of others.

Among the numerous natural curiosities to be found, perhaps the following are most widely known:

In Franconia Notch are the "Old Man of the Mountain," the Flume, the Pool, the Basin, the Indian Head.

In Pinkham Notch are many beautiful waterfalls, the Glen Ellis and Crystal Cascades being very noted for their beauty.

Carter Notch contains a stone shelter for the mountain trapper. Here food and shelter may be found.

Crawford Notch is a New Hampshire State Reservation, and is nearly surrounded by the National Forest. The West Gate of Crawford Notch is one of the scenic attractions of the White Mountain region.

The Lost River region, the Lakes of the Clouds—located 5000 feet above the sea—Echo and Profile Lakes, Giant's Stairs, all are landmarks of beauty, visited annually by hundreds of tourists.

When the season opens—about the middle of June—until the middle of October the big hotels teem with a gay throng. Golf courses are to be found at almost every resort, many of them having their own characteristics and traditions. Tennis courts, baseball, bathing facilities, all of the various sports of the new and old world, are to be found here. Motoring and pedestrianism are encouraged by the magnificent roads of the district. Bicycle paths, riding masters and a splendidivery encourage the use of the horse for driving and riding.

The trolley and the mountain wagon, accompanied perhaps by a chef, will leave one of the great hotels and be gone a portion of a week or more for a tour of a section of this great estate. The motor tourist is always in evidence.

Until recently this region was celebrated only as a delightful summering place. Within the past few years, however, such a keen and active interest has been taken in the winter sports that there is every indication that it will soon be almost as popular as a winter resort. The wonderful opportunities for skiing, snowshoeing, tobogganing, skating and sleighing are bringing in increasing numbers every year people who enjoy these unique and delightful winter sports. The White Mountain National Forest area consists of about 327,600 acres in Coos, Carroll and Grafton Counties in New Hampshire, and projects slightly into the adjoining State of Maine. Its boundaries embrace nearly all of the mountain country from the Pliny Range on the north to Sandwich Dome on the south, and from beyond the Maine State line on the east nearly to the Connecticut River on the west. It contains numerous mountains which reach a height of over 4000 feet, and the loftiest of these, Mount Washington, rises to an altitude of 6290 feet above sea level, and is one of the highest mountains of the Appalachian system.

The establishment of the White Mountain Forest performs a most important public service in providing a playground for the people, and its use for all sorts of outdoor recreation is encouraged.
